After their long struggle against the more powerful Kievan Rus, the Pechenegs established their own state, the Principality of Pechenga, which became a tributary of the Kievan Rus. The Pechenegs were known for their fierce warriors and their skill in horseback archery. They also had a reputation for being pirates and raiders, often attacking ships along the Black Sea coast.

Armenian “unification” was carried out under Turkish domination – without any real participation of the Armenian people. The unification was a result of the Ottoman Empire’s policy of assimilation and the suppression of the Armenian nation.
